
Oxford University Press

Studies in Language, Gender, and Sexuality

Guidelines for Submission

Series Editor

Lal Zimman (University of California, Santa Barbara)

Advisory Board

Deborah Cameron (University of Oxford)

Marjorie Harness Goodwin (University of California, Los Angeles)

Michelle Lazar (National University of Singapore)

William Leap (American University)

Bonnie McElhinny (University of Toronto)

Tommaso Milani (University of the Witwatersrand)

Norma Mendoza-Denton (University of California, Los Angeles)

Pia Pichler (Goldsmiths University of London)

Studies in Language, Gender, and Sexuality offers a broadly interdisciplinary forum for pioneering new scholarship in the field. The mandate of the series is to encourage innovative work on language, gender, and sexuality, which may be achieved through the revisitation of familiar topics from fresh vantage points, through the introduction of new avenues of research, or through new theoretical or methodological frameworks. Volumes may be authored by scholars in such disciplines as anthropology, sociology, literary studies, education, psychology, ethnic studies, and women's studies, as well as linguistics. In addition, monographs, textbooks, and edited collections that fit the series' emphasis on innovation will be appropriate for inclusion.

Complete manuscripts are preferred, but partial manuscripts and proposals may also be submitted. For proposal guidelines, see <https://global.oup.com/academic/authors/submissions/>

The following materials will help in the evaluation of the manuscript or proposal:

- (1) A current curriculum vitae (for edited collections, send only the editor's CV);
- (2) A statement of the book's themes, purpose, and contribution to the field;
- (3) A table of contents;
- (4) A chapter-by-chapter synopsis;
- (5) The complete manuscript if possible; otherwise submit as much of the manuscript as is available.
For proposals, include the introduction and one or two sample chapters if possible;
- (6) For edited volumes, notes on contributors (name, position, affiliation).

For further information or to submit a manuscript or proposal to SLGS, contact:

Lal Zimman, SLGS Series Editor
Department of Linguistics
Mail code 3100
University of California, Santa Barbara
Santa Barbara, CA, 93106-3100
E-mail: zimman@linguistics.ucsb.edu

Hallie Stebbins, Linguistics Editor
Oxford University Press
198 Madison Avenue
New York, NY 10016-4314
E-mail: Hallie.Stebbins@oup.com
Phone: (212) 726-6461